India is known for celebrating a wide range of festivals the entire year. People have their roots in all these cultural festivals connected to different religions, deities, beliefs, and old traditions. While some even hold mythological, historical, and social significance, all of them are celebrated with joy and happiness. Moreover, to seek blessings from the deities associated with some of these festivals, people observe fast, while for some they perform charity and prayers. However it may be, each Indian festival is considered an auspicious occasion. And, to mark all the festivals and occasions in one place, there is the Indian calendar for 2023. Moreover, some calendars are religion-specific, like the Hindu calendar, Islamic calendar, Sikh calendar, etc. As many as around 30 calendars are followed across the nation to prepare a precise chart of festivals and occasions across the nation. Lunar Calendar Where the Sun is the center of the universe, the planet Moon and its lunation is something we cannot ignore in astrology. Moon phases are quite depicting and reveal a lot other than being a vital part of the astrology world. The lunation of the Moon, therefore, holds its significance in the form of a calendar. A Lunar calendar helps to figure out the dates of the Muslim festival and fasts. Festivals like Karwa Chauth, Eid, etc., are celebrated on the basis of the lunar cycle. The Hindu festival calendar is based on the lunar cycle. The Hindu festival calendar 2023 possesses all the details regarding the festivals, fasts, and other occasions of Christianity. Away from the lunisolar format, the Christian calendar solely depends on the solar calendar. Origin of Indian Calendar The Indian National Calendar, also known as the Shalivahana Shaka Calendar, is commonly used for delivering information or news alongside the Gregorian Calendar. In the 1950s, the Calendar Reform Committee performed a survey that revealed the use of approximately 30 distinct calendars to identify Hindu, Buddhist, and Jain festivals. While all calendars shared basic ideas rooted in ancient rituals and astronomical practices, their diversity created issues. Muslims in India, on the other hand, followed the Islamic calendar, while the Indian government followed the Gregorian calendar for administrative purposes. The Calendar Reform of 1957 C.E. tried to resolve this variability by formalizing a structured lunisolar calendar as Indias National Calendar. To ensure synchronization, leap years were synchronized with the Gregorian calendar. Despite these attempts, regional variations persist, and the government continues to use the Gregorian calendar for administrative purposes. Holidays represent regional, ethnic, and religious variety by adhering to specific beliefs and traditions. In terms of ethics, astrologers use the Panchang or Panchangam (Hindu Lunar Calendar) to find auspicious marriage dates following horoscope compatibility. Structure of Indian Calendar The Shaka Calendar is based on the luni-solar system as per time, and consists of 12 months and 365 days. The first month in Indian Calendar is Chaitra and the last is Phalguna. The names of the months as per Shaka Calendar are as follows: 1. Chaitra 2. Vaishakha 3. Jyeshtha 4. Ashadha 5. Sravana 6. Bhadra 7. Ashwin 8. Kartika 9. Agrahayana 10. Pausa 11. Magha 12. Phalguna The National Calendar is an advanced modification of Indian Solar Calendars still existing in the regions. The principle unit remains the civil day and era is Saka era. It is structured so as to correspond with the Tropical or Sayana year and not traditional Sideral or Nirayana year. Religious holidays are based on lunisolar calendar which acknowledges specific positions of Moon and Sun. Majority of festivals and holidays occur on a mentioned lunar tithi (date) while others on solar tithis. Lunar Calendar is witnessed as the main element when providing predictions in Vedic Astrology or calculating muhurat, festivals and so on, planet Sun has its own significance. A Solar Calendar narrates the apparent position of planet Sun in the universe. One such example is Gregorian Calendar, which is used internationally and counted as the standard tool. In astrology, a solar month describes the position of Sun's longitude to increase during the interval by 30 degree corresponding to its passage through a zodiac sign. Indian Solar Calendar Indian Calendar as per Solar Month is given below which describes the Hindu months and their Gregorian dates. Below dates approximately corresponds with the Gregorian calendar based on the position of Sun. the table is provided for you for reference purposes. Some famous examples are French, Gregorian, Roman calendars and Indian Solar Calendars used in the areas of Assam, Bengal, Haryana, Kerala, Punjab, Orissa, Tamil Nadu and Tripura. An actual solar calendar doesn't consists of months of days, hence in order to synchronize, days are summed up and leap years are formed. Indian National Calendar comes under this category. ● The Lunar Calendars: It is based on the monthly phases of Moon and its cycle and isn't related to the motion of Sun whatsoever. Islamic Hejira Calendar is one such example and a pure lunar calendar. It consists of 12 months, with 2 months covering two new moons. Each Lunar month is about 29.5 days long. ● The Lunisolar Calendar: It accumulates yearly motion of Sun and monthly phases of Moon. some examples are Jews and Babylonian calendars along with Indian Calendars used in Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Gujarat, Karnataka, Kashmir, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh. Adoption & Official Usage Indian Calendar was officially adopted in 1957 by Calendar Reform Committee as a significant part of Nautical Almanac and Indian Ephemeris. The need for a unified calendar was voiced by none other than the first prime minister of India, Pt. Jawaharlal Nehru. He said as quoted, They (different calendars) represent past political divisions in the country.... Now that we have attained Independence, it is obviously desirable that there should be certain uniformity in the calendar for our civic, social, and other purposes, and this should be done on a scientific approach to this problem. One main criteria was to make the calendar free of any religious or regional conflict, easy to navigate, reliable and precise. Hence, the committee came up with Saka Calendar, which was made official on March 22, 1957 or Chaitra 1, 1879. Significance The Saka Calendar represents the Indian beliefs and culture and traditions. Adopting it as the national calendar is a tribute to ancient innovation and ideas. This calendar is observed beyond Indian borders by Hindus in Java, Bali Indonesia and other Southeast Asian countries. Its most noted uses are: ● In the Gazette of India along with Gregorian calendar ● At All India Radio Broadcasts ● By Govt. of India to provide documents, timetables, communication via Saka Calendar dates You can get detailed list of Government, Hindu, Islamic, Sikh and Christian holidays and festivals from this page.
